CONCEPT NOTE

Tourism, one of the largest service industries of the world relatively had a direct role to play when it comes to COVID-19 whose worldwide spread has brought the world economies into a sudden halt. It has a wide impact not only on the Tourism sector, but also on all people across the society irrespective of their professions.

Since travel has become an important part of everyone's life and is no longer considered as a luxury but a necessity to escape from a mundane routine and rejuvenate, we are positive that travel will revive soon. Since time immemorial the human desire to travel and explore is universal, which will positively turn the wheel for everyone to enjoy vacations.

So too must the many social and economic benefits that tourism brings be available to everybody. The recovery might be slow, but we are sure, once we manage to control this pandemic, the tourism & travel industry will be the first one to see the major leap, but with new dimensions, perspective, attitude, scope, and above all with new challenges. But especially, inbound tourism may face serious crisis as travel restrictions will follow. We have to remember that in this situation we need to think about an all inclusive growth to give support to the people and stakeholders of all sectors.

UNWTO announces that, as tourism grows further, the industry will reap benefits that will be felt at every sectors and sub sectors of our broad and diverse industry, from the biggest airline to the smallest family business. The need of the day is to further conserve and preserve our history and heritage for the growth and development of the industry.

This webinar will seek to analyze various aspects, survey and measure all possibilities, related to the role of History, Heritage, Culture and Tourism in the near future to create various scopes for people from all sectors of the economy in this new scenario.
